By Kristine L. Alave

METRO MANILA and most of Luzon might be sitting under an unbearably scorching sun, but Eulene Vazquez is finding sweet relief in occasional rain showers that have tempered the heat of recent days.

As Manila sweltered at 36.6 degrees Celsius yesterday—the highest this year so far—Tacloban City experienced intermittent rain the whole day Monday.

The rain was a welcome reprieve for residents of Tacloban whose hottest day was recorded

Unease over rising US presence

PORT MANSOUR—The signal from the US Army's 16th Infantry Brigade was meeting quietly through the halls of Luzon when the massive bases of machine gunners were taken into action.

About a dozen soldiers fired into the surrounding area.

While a small contingent broke away to make a direct assault on the facility, the rest of the force, dressed in green fatigues, the signal cleared the area.

The flight was part of joint military exercises in which the message, at least in part, appeared to be clear despite proclamations to the contrary. The exercises included mock beach landings along coastline facing China, whose military backing and territorial claims in the South China Sea have alarmed some of its neighbors and jump-started the US

Bright Intramuros night tours up

By Jocelyn R. Uy

ALBANY A popular stop on day tours of Manila, the historic walled city of Intramuros will soon become a nighttime destination, too, and not only for foreign visitors but also for Filipinos.

In six months, Fort Santiago, which houses the Rizal Shrine, will open its gates to guests for nightly cultural shows.

Nothing for night visitors to fear, as the Walled City will no longer be dark at night. The place includes installing lights in the centuries-old buildings and churches of Intramuros.

And the nearby Manila Park by Pasig River will become a village of cafes, restaurants and shops, resembling Singapore's Clarke Quay, a historic PRESIDENT Aquino, whose public approval rating is slipping amid rising prices and stagnating wages, is expected to announce a package of benefits for workers on Labor Day today, as organized workers stage protest rallies nationwide to press for wage increases.

"There will be good news (for workers) definitely," said Fabian Lacarida, the President's spokesperson.

But Lacarida declined to say what was in store for workers. He reportedly told reporters to just wait for the President's announcement today.

"We will let the President do the announcement," he said at a press briefing.

Mr. Aquino is scheduled to have a breakfast meeting with labor leaders in Malacañang today where he will announce the package of benefits for workers.

The President announced on Sunday what was in store for 1.6 million government employees.

He said the government would release one month earlier the fourth and last installment of salary increases under the Salary Standardization Bill program.

'Twas no campaign sortie, says Palace

By Christine G. Reyes
and Ed Calalang

MALACANAP last night charged off on what President Aquino said could be a campaign sortie when he indicated his possible electoral candidates in the 2015 election during an on-air interview on Sunday.

President-elect Benigno Aquino III and others were in the audience, including Vice President Noyen, when Mr. Aquino said the people in his administration would be looking for the right people to run for the 2015 election.

The President also said he needed time to help him pick his running mate.

"It's not good to have him," Aquino said of Duterte and Villanueva, who are running from being used as electoral candidates of the President by Mr. Aquino.

"There is no premature campaigning because nobody has filed a certificate of candidacies yet," Aquino said. "They have already announced they don't want to run," Aquino said, referring to both Duterte and Villanueva.

Both Duterte and Villanueva welcomed Mr. Aquino's endorsement but said they had not yet made up their minds about joining the Aquino team.

As the developed, progressive allies of the President are wary of the LP's plan to begin an alliance with Sen. Manuel Villar's Nacionalista Party for the 2013 elections.

It continues may be built on common principles and values. If a coalition with the LP is built on common principles and values on issues, that is all it takes to give the coalition some strength. It is purely for electoral convenience, then I must definitely support it. We need to make broad, early alliances of convenience," said Duterte party-list Rep. Edcel Magsaysay in a text message.

LP leaders confirmed they had indicated support for the LP to give Villar's wife, former Los Pilos Rep. Corina Villar, and other lawmakers. Sen. Manuel Villar was included in the LP's coalition list for 2013.

The LP is playing catch-up in Vice President Antonio Trillanes and former President

Joseph Estrada who have already joined the United National Alliance (UNA) coalition for the 2013 and 2015 elections. Ranney Telo, head of members of the civil society group Kapayahan, said the President should not go to "any town, any house" in the 2013 elections such as Villar's Alibon party list. Sen. Francisco Duterte said in the 2010 senatorial race, the President's cousin Benigno Aquino, Jr. was a Duterte Group member and Duterte Rep. and LP spokespersons were "lost" Duterte III.

"We understand that this political position is a reality of politics. But we would like to see and hope that the LP also understands the value of the LP in the 2013 elections. There is no one realizing if the LP will not be in the 2013 elections, it will be lost," Duterte said.

'Mining in PH behind times'

By Kristine L. Reyes

FLORIDA miners will work under conditions that are a far cry from the previous mining industry in the Philippines, according to a report by local and international labor groups here.

After years of mining practices, workers in the Philippines are the victims of the highly industrialized mining in the country, said the report.

The report said that the mining industry in the Philippines is "behind times" in terms of safety, health, and environmental protection.

"Mining companies do not even respect the national resources of the country, but also greatly exploit Filipino laborers with very low wages and unsafe working conditions," said the report.

'Good news for workers'

The pay increase for government workers will be released on May 1 instead of July 1.

This was a report of what President Aquino did on Labor Day in 2011 when he was elected president.

Mr. Aquino also had a lunch for meeting with labor leaders last year.

Recently, said the President, the meeting between the President and labor leaders would be an opportunity for the Chief Executive to "hear our labor union leaders."

This was the President to address the workers' concerns, he added.

The most recent national survey that the administration has released indicates a continuing increasing growth, according to results of a nationwide survey conducted by Pulse Asia in Manila.

The survey, administration received six known public approval rating on this matter.

Protest of basic goods and services have gone up mainly as a result of a series of fuel price increases, while minimum wages have stagnated.

Wage increases, job creation and poverty reduction were the top priorities for the administration, said the administration, most address, the survey found.

Wage issues
The administration has led the granting and raising of any wage increase in regional tripartite wage and productivity boards.

The board recently granted an increase of P12 in the daily minimum wage in Western Visayas, an amount workers have asked.

"It is an issue to workers. It is not even enough to pay for the food and housing for the workers," he said.

The GMA is calling for the legislation of wage increases and the enacting of the regional wage boards.

Protest marches
Faced with demands of workers and their supporters, President Aquino said Labor Day protests to demand a P125 across the board increase to the daily minimum wage, a step to democratization and the strengthening of the UN Declaration of May Day, which they have for the continued increase in fuel prices.

He said 300,000 workers and 300,000 workers would lead more than 2,500 protesters in Manila and around 300 protesters in the regional offices of Manila and in the cities of Manila.

In Manila, a broad alliance of labor groups is expected to lead 20,000 workers in a march on the streets of Manila.

The GMA is calling for the legislation of wage increases and the enacting of the regional wage boards.

Something significant
To the President, Aquino said it was important "something good and better" from the Labor Day protests to demand a P125 across the board increase to the daily minimum wage, a step to democratization and the strengthening of the UN Declaration of May Day, which they have for the continued increase in fuel prices.

P18 wage hike in Calabarzon, but ...

By Maricela Goico
Bureau Staff Writer

SAN PEDRO, Laguna—Ricky Pangilinan, 42, an employee of an electronics firm in Iloilo, Cavite, had already heard the news that as P18 daily wage increase and P12.50 daily productivity allowance will be implemented in Calabarzon (Cavite, Laguna, Batangas, Rizal, Quezon), starting on May 15.

But Pangilinan, who is paid P1800 a day, will not get any extra cash for his daily pay to meet the new P1875 daily wage increase and P125 daily productivity allowance in the province.

He gets P200 a day "extra" because he has been with the company for 22 years," Pangilinan said.

With his salary for said, ruling his family out for a day in a suit would be a luxury he could not afford. "I am for the little amount my wife gets from her business venture," he said, but that doesn't offset his "Overtime" extra payment above the minimum wage increase," Pangilinan said.

Although he is entitled to the productivity allowance, "they still let the company to determine. What if the company says they cannot afford it?" he asked.

Under the new wage order, the highest minimum wage rate, which is P18.1, is set at P18.50 in manufacturing or information, P18.34 in agriculture, and P18.14 in services.

That is an additional P12.50 in productivity allowance in the manufacturing sector.

But in an additional P12.50 in productivity allowance in the manufacturing sector, P12.50 is the agricultural plantation, P12.50 is the agribusiness complement, and P12.50 per day in the retail and service establishments.

The lowest adjustment is ... to split the standards of living of workers. A wage level that takes into account the cost of living, the cost of the workers' wage and other economic factors," the DOE said in a statement.

The productivity-based adjustment, or Part 2, is set at P12.50 per day for those working in a day and above. The amount could go higher depending on the productivity improvement and incentive component (PIC), which is composed of both the management and workers' representatives.

"But all companies have the PIC, yet, I don't know the wage order," they have to know their HCR within three months from May 15," said Novella de la Rosa, secretary of the Regional Directorate of Labor and Productivity Board.

Labor groups were not too happy with the wage increase.

"That is too small, not even enough to provide relief to the workers given the (economic) crisis," said Maricela Pangilinan, spokesperson of the Federation of Laborers of Calabarzon (FLOCAL) in Taguig, Batangas (Quezon).

However, the regional group of the National Federation of Laborers (NFTL) has been pushing for a P12.50 increase for those working in the area, saying it "promotes" in equally and different manner" along workers.

"This would be a challenge for the union to be able to meet the demand for the workers' wage and other economic factors," said Maricela Pangilinan, spokesperson of the Federation of Laborers of Calabarzon (FLOCAL) in Taguig, Batangas (Quezon).

UN chief urges West to ease Burma sanctions

GENEVA—UN chief Ban Ki-moon Monday urged the West to drop long Myanmar sanctions, in a show of support for the reformist regime on being told by his undersecretary in his office to order his undersecretary to do so.

Ban welcomed news by the international community to reward sweeping changes in the country over the past of three years into last year, in a landmark speech in parliament following talks with President Thein Sein.

"Today, I urge the international community to give credit for living, supporting, or taking more sanctions and other actions," he said in the first speech by a foreign dignitary to the Shwepyithar Assembly.

Ban, who is in Myanmar for the first time since the new quasi-civil government, is the latest in a string of top foreign visitors amid a move to the camp-dominated nation's relations with the West, which has begun lifting trade sanctions in response to reforms.

The UN chief was not welcomed by Sun Kyi and other members of the 2008 constitution, under which any member of the state is parliament are reserved for elected military officials.

The army-backed ruling Union Solidarity and Development Party (USDP) welcomed the decision by the UN to look down on the new coalition.

"I have decided to comply in this manner, because we do not want a political problem or tension," he said, ending on a note seen as an early sign of friction with the government since he was a parliamentarian until he became UN's top official.

In his speech to MPs he hailed the "new leadership and courage" of Thein Sein, who has moved in a clear direction in the last year including welcoming Sun Kyi's party into the government and forming political prisoners.

"The path of change is still long and uncertain, but it is indeed no return to run back," he said from the podium of the parliament building, adding that Myanmar's changes PROSPERITY Leader Aung San Suu Kyi from other teams, Suu Kyi and her party have agreed to send a list of parliament and swear an oath to protect the constitution that had existed.

"have inspired the world." President Thein Sein and Aung San Suu Kyi have demonstrated the confidence and determination needed to look beyond politics to the larger interests of the nation."

The UN Secretary-General, who was welcomed by the joint from seeing Sun Kyi and her party during his previous visit to Myanmar in 2008, is set to meet the Union Solidarity and Development Party (USDP) before he leaves for his first trip during his three-day trip.

Suu Kyi is seen expected to take the oath on Myanmar's constitution to UN's secretary.

"The reason we accept it, daily in the name of the people," he said.

"Our vision for an better future would come in a parliament."

The democracy from his said one of his priorities in a politician is to push for an amendment of the 2008 constitution, under which any member of the state is parliament are reserved for elected military officials.

The army-backed ruling Union Solidarity and Development Party (USDP) welcomed the decision by the UN to look down on the new coalition.

"I have decided to comply in this manner, because we do not want a political problem or tension," he said, ending on a note seen as an early sign of friction with the government since he was a parliamentarian until he became UN's top official.

In his speech to MPs he hailed the "new leadership and courage" of Thein Sein, who has moved in a clear direction in the last year including welcoming Sun Kyi's party into the government and forming political prisoners.

"The path of change is still long and uncertain, but it is indeed no return to run back," he said from the podium of the parliament building, adding that Myanmar's changes

"have inspired the world." President Thein Sein and Aung San Suu Kyi have demonstrated the confidence and determination needed to look beyond politics to the larger interests of the nation."

PAL raising fuel surcharge on flights to India

By Priya S. Mahalingam

FUEL prices may be starting to go down but the country's flag carrier continues to bid the upward on its margins. PAL is planning to increase fuel prices for a key international route.

Philippine Airlines is seeking the government's approval to raise its fuel surcharge on its flight to New Delhi, India, which the company flies to via Bangkok.

From the existing fuel price of $1.10 per gallon, PAL wants to increase it to $1.20, an increase of 9.1 percent.

The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) is scheduled to hold a hearing on PAL's petition next month.

PAL flight to New Delhi was introduced last year but the direct service was halted months later due to weak demand. PAL now flies to New Delhi via Bangkok, where the airline can pick up more passengers and improve the service's profitability.

At March, PAL raised its fuel surcharge on most of its domestic and international flights. Fuel surcharges are a key part of the airline's revenue.

The company also recently increased its ticket prices for all routes to India to pick up the rise in fuel costs.

The airline charges for the increase of domestic tickets was increased in PAL's latest fare increase, which was implemented in May.

Yesterday's average for the benchmark bill was 1/4 basis points higher than the corresponding 1/5 percent rate for the same period in the secondary market.

Also, interest rates on both the 10-day and 30-day bill fell by 1/2 basis points to an average of 2.34 percent, and by 1/4 basis points to 2.34 percent, respectively.
